Kenneth Berrill:

Industry year is very concerned to improve, obviously, British industry and particularly those parts of manufacturing industry which have suffered so badly in recent years. The role of continuing education in that process is clear enough and who better to speak to us about that role than the Vice-Chancellor of The Open University, with the very, very large part that The Open University plays in continuing education and a Vice-Chancellor who has particular links over the years, with British industry. Ladies and gentlemen, Dr John Horlock.
