

Open Forum 02 (1971) : Programme 2

Clip: Open Forum 02 (1971) Introduction

of2_clip1

[Countdown begins]

10...9...8...7...6...5...4...3

[Music plays]

James Barber:

Hello and welcome to the second television Open Forum. If you didn't see the first of these programmes or if you haven't been listening to Open Forum on radio, then let me briefly outline what we intend to do on these programmes. The aim is that we introduce general topics which are of interest to the university as whole and that we also spread around knowledge of the university.

You'll find that each month there's an Open University television programme. That's on the first Sunday of the month at the same time. As well as that, there's a weekly radio programme. In the television programme, we're going to choose topics which are of broad interest, and we're going to introduce into the studio, students, and staff, and they'll discuss the topic. We don't want to confine the discussion just here to the television studio. We hope that you'll all feel involved, and if you feel involved enough that you want to make a response, either to what we've been saying or perhaps to put in some new points or to add new material that we should be discussing, then we'd like you to contact us. So at the end of the programme, I'll give you an address and a telephone number from which you can contact us.